Super Summer

As I write this article, it's thirty above and the lake is like glass. I can't believe the great summer we've had - the only problem was it just goes by way to quick.

Matthew is actually excited about school and seeing his buddies. Sheila is busy keeping on top of her garden, and I'm busy getting things ready for fall.

As I was driving the other day back from a meeting in Saskatoon, I found myself a little tired behind the wheel. I'm sure most of us deal with this from time to time, and that's driver fatigue. Please take the time to read this and the tips so that you're safe out there.

Thanks for choosing Heritage Insurance and please take care out there.

Driver Fatigue

Fatigue can creep up on us in many ways. If it happens to find you behind the wheel, it's important to know what to do to keep everyone on the road safe.

Driving drowsy reduces your attentiveness and increases the time it takes to react to potential hazards. It adds up to a major impairment that puts you and those around you at risk of a collision.

Research shows that people who only sleep six and a half hours a night are twice as likely to fall asleep at the wheel than those who get eight hours of rest.

The consequences of drowsy driving can be tragic. On average in Saskatchewan, more than 145 people are injured and seven are killed each year in crashes involving driver fatigue.

Symptoms of driver fatigue

Recognizing the symptoms of a fatigued driver can help prevent these collisions. One of the first signs of drowsiness is a tendency to stare at the road in front of you rather than scanning for hazards. Other red flags include:

- Yawning
- Daydreaming
- Trouble keeping your head up or eyes open
- Forgetting the last few kilometers you've driven
- Not noticing vehicles until they pass
- Drifting out of your lane
- Difficulty maintaining your speed

People prone to driver fatigue

Certain people are particularly vulnerable to driver fatigue, including:

- Shift workers
- University and college students
- Workers in the transport industry
- Long-distance travellers
- People with sleep disorders
- Those who use alcohol or medications

Is Your Investment Plan On Track?

This past week investors caught a case of the jitters as fears about the global economy spooked the markets. This clearly indicates that fear has once again taken center stage like it has in the past.

To ensure you remain calm in this time of economic uncertainty, I recommend taking the time to revisit your investment plan.

There are 5 steps to consider:

1. Reaffirm your risk tolerance (Achieving balance of risk vs return.)
2. Realign your return expectations (Ups and downs do happen.)
3. Reassess your investment options (how many yrs left before retirement?)
4. Rebalance and rebuild (If necessary, may need to make changes to your plan) Reinvest in your plan (Take action based on your plan—don't wait to reinvest—lost opportunities could occur.)

I welcome the opportunity to help ease any uncertainty you may have in your planning by reviewing these 5 steps with you.

I look forward to you call!

If you find yourself getting fatigued behind the wheel:

- It's safest to get off the road.
- Admit that you're tired and find a rest area to have a quick nap.
- If other people are in the vehicle,

switch drivers so you can sleep in the passenger seat.

These solutions are the most effective ways to stay safe on the road. Quick-fix solutions like coffee, loud music and open windows may perk you up temporarily, but in the end they still leave you dangerously fatigued.

Of course, drowsy driving can be avoided altogether if you get plenty of rest. Hit the sack before hitting the road and you'll help ensure that everyone arrives at their destinations safely.
